Provo Honors Pioneer Spirit

Provo, settled as Fort Utah in 1849, is 135 years old today.

The anniversary will be marked on Wednesday with a noon luncheon and program at the Eldred Center by the Sons and Daughters of the Pioneers of Provo and the Senior Citizens.

The first colony of Mormon settlers — sent from Great Salt Lake Valley by President Brigham Young as the Fort Utah Branch or Mission — arrived on the banks of the Provo River April 1.

Historian J. M. Jensen recounted that the colonists forded the river after being stopped by the Timpanogos Ute Indians and made to swear by the sun that they would not drive the redmen from their lands.

ORPA, landed in the heavily guarded Polytechnic School formerly used to train officer cadets.

"Two mortar shells landed in offices and another in a courtyard at the old Polytechnic School where Defense Ministry records are kept," Dominguez said at a Monday news conference.

The school, a low, gray castle-like structure, is located in Guatemala City along the city's main boulevard, 100 yards from the home of chief of state Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores and two blocks from the U.S. Embassy.

Dominguez said the mortar fire also destroyed an automobile and damaged three others.
